Find Answers to Your Most Common Questions!

Do I really need travel insurance?

Yes, travel insurance offers a safety net for unexpected events that could disrupt your trip, ensuring you're financially and medically protected.

How much should my travel insurance cost?

The cost of travel insurance can vary based on factors such as your age, destination, trip length, coverage limits, and the type of coverage you select. On average, basic travel insurance typically costs between 4% to 10% of your total trip cost. The price may increase for more comprehensive coverage or longer trips.

Is travel insurance necessary if I already have health insurance?

While your health insurance may cover you domestically, it often doesn't extend internationally or cover trip-specific incidents like trip cancellations. Travel insurance provides additional protection tailored to travel-related risks.

What is the difference between trip cancellation and trip interruption coverage?

Trip cancellation coverage reimburses you for prepaid, non-refundable trip costs if you need to cancel before departure. Trip interruption coverage reimburses you for unused, prepaid trip costs if you need to cut your trip short due to a covered reason.

Are there exclusions or limitations to travel insurance coverage?

Yes, common exclusions include pre-existing medical conditions, risky activities (such as extreme sports), and certain high-risk destinations. Be sure to read your policy carefully to understand what is and isn't covered.
